

Keep on dreaming

How far would you dare to accompany the shadows of silence when at midnight
They invite you to dream?
And what kind of smile could you give us tomorrow when you wake up?

You could stop time while you play hiding between the labyrinths of memory

Watch a shower of stars while swimming in a river of fluorescent watercolors in the northern lights

You could float between the empty spaces of Saturn's rings

And climb the borders from the east or from the west from above or from below of awakening

Or to keep on dreaming beyond midnight
along with the cold north wind
